

End-of-Repair Support Announcement for CM-300/350 (V1) Air Traffic Control (ATC) Radios

Summary

General Dynamics Mission Systems announces a change in repair support for the CM-300/350 (V1) series Air Traffic Control (ATC) Radios.

After ending production on these radios in 2015, our goal has been to maintain supportability for as long as possible. However, General Dynamics Mission Systems will no longer be able to service repairs, offer accessory options, or provide updates/upgrades and technical assistance on out-of-warranty units effective March 31, 2020 due to component availability issues and our ongoing commitments to support warrantied units.

We encourage our user community to learn more about our current ATC radios, the CM-300/350 \(V2\) series, when considering replacement radios. The CM-300/350 (V2) radios provide over 400,000 hours of Mean Time Between Failure (MTBF) and far exceed the capability of the CM-300/350 (V1) radios. Users will see improved co-site performance, have the ability to add new features via software updates, and will have the option to utilize either analog or IP functionality. More information on the CM-300/350 (V2) radio products can be found at www.gdmissionsystems.com/ATC.
